To support your members, start with their kids

We’re in the middle of an urgent pediatric behavioral health crisis — in fact, 1 in 5 children have a diagnosed behavioral health need and 80% are not getting the care they need.¹ And that was before a pandemic, social distancing and isolation, remote learning, and the rapid blurring of our work and home lives.

So, what does that mean for your members? Our COVID Behavioral Health Indicator Survey found that 50% of members are losing significant productivity at work and 1 in 3 are spending 4–5 hours on their child’s behavioral health needs. Members are overwhelmed, burned out, and leaving the workforce in droves — working parents are more stressed out than ever.

That’s why Aetna has partnered with us, to bring Brightline services to your members and their families.

The goal of this toolkit is to empower you to help families get the support they need for their children, when and where they need it. We’re so excited to be working together.

Leadership announcement email

One of the best ways for your members to hear about Brightline? Hear right from you! Starting with a joint announcement email can help them learn about their new benefit, and encourage them to start exploring their options with Brightline.

We’re so excited to introduce you to Brightline, a new behavioral health benefit for families that you now have as an Aetna subscriber.

Brightline brings you extraordinary behavioral health care for kids and teens, and support for parents and caregivers like you. Even better? It’s all delivered virtually, so you can get support when and where you need it. When you join Brightline, you’ll have support for all of the everyday challenges so many of us are dealing with, and common conditions that many kids and teens experience. So whether that’s school pressure or navigating IEP processes, stress, anxious thoughts, navigating social media or cyberbullying, tough behavior, self-esteem issues, sleep problems — whatever you have going on, Brightline can help.

When you sign up for Brightline, you will immediately have access to care for kids 18 months up to 18 years old — and support for you, too.

- Premium Connect+ membership: On-the-go access to personalized resources, interactive exercises, group classes, and on-demand chat with your Brightline Coach
- Coaching: Skills-based programs led by expert behavioral health coaches to help kids and teens through everyday challenges in 30-minute sessions and as few as four weeks
- Care: Personalized care by video visit with child and adolescent psychologists, psychiatrists, speech therapists, and others to help with common conditions like anxiety, depression, ADHD, disruptive behavior, and more

So your kid has some questions about race

Black History Month is a time of celebration but it can also bring up complex questions around race & racial injustice. Here are some expert tips for navigating these challenging convos with your kids & teens.

REGULATE YOUR OWN EMOTIONS
If your kid has big emotions related to race, it’s completely normal if you feel triggered by it. You don’t have to hide your emotions, but try to remain calm even if you’re sad or scared.

FIND OUT WHERE THE QUESTION IS COMING FROM
It’s not always necessary (or even possible) to answer all your kid’s questions. The key is to find out where they’re coming from. Where did they learn this information? What are they confused or curious about? Leave the conversation open-ended so they feel comfortable asking more questions in the future.

BRING IT BACK TO YOUR OWN VALUES AS A FAMILY
Don’t worry about speaking for all families or experiences. By reinforcing your values as a family, you can emphasize the strength & value of your child’s race and ethnicity.

VALIDATE THEIR EMOTIONS (AND DON’T SUGARCOAT THINGS)
It can be really hard to hear that your child is feeling scared or bad about themselves. But, instead of trying to make that feeling go away, make more room for them to share. Avoid telling them everything’s going to be okay, and make sure you’re always clear, direct, and factual.

IT’S OKAY TO NEED MORE SUPPORT
Most people aren’t trained to have conversations about race — you don’t need to be an expert. Listen more than you speak, and rely on trustworthy resources to help. Take breaks if you need to, but be sure to pick the conversation back up.
